- ④ Available through multiple channels
  - The Web
  - e-media
- ④ However...
  - Fragmentation!

Semantic Search in Europeana

The screenshot shows the Europeana search results for the keyword "Raphael". It includes two main sections: "works created by matching person (33)" and "works showing (5)". The first section displays five images of Raphael's work, including "Hood van een vrouw" and "MUSICA". The second section displays five more images, including "RAPHAEL AU VATICAN" and "Etudes pour L'Apothéose d'Homère".

Searching with keyword "Raphael"

The screenshot shows the Europeana search results for the keyword "teacher". It includes two main sections: "works created by a teacher of matching person (14)" and "works created by a student of matching person (19)". The first section displays six images of works by teachers, including "APOLLO ET MARIESSA" and "LE GOMBAZ DE L'AMOUR". The second section displays six images of works by students, including "Offertory voor een paer" and "Offertory voor de moer".

CultureSampo - Finnish Culture on the Semantic Web

The screenshot shows the CultureSampo application interface. It features a world map where arrows connect different locations, representing semantic relations. A callout box explains: "The thickness of arrows express the confidence for a relation." Another callout box states: "By selecting different locations a user can examine its cultural heritage relations to other locations." Below the map, there are three detailed views of specific locations: Ruokolahti (1920), Imatra (1957), and Joutseno (1930). Each view shows artifacts from that location, such as a wooden chair, a top hat, and a pipe.

CIDOC-CRM

"... a high level ontology to enable information integration for cultural heritage data ..."

- ⇒ A reference model and information standard for providing data integration and knowledge representation
(Current official version: 5.0.2, January 2010)
- ⇒ CRM's RDFS implementation is also available!

Why useful to have CRM ontology is a more expressive language (e.g., OWL)?

- ⇒ Enables reasoning on and discovery of cultural heritage information over distributed knowledge resources

LIDO, STAR, the Arachne project, SCULPTEUR, Museum of New Zealand, ... use CRM
